Drones Stray into Restricted Airspace Up to “Six Times A Day”

In 2017, drones intruded into protected airspace an average of 6 times/day in the US according to FAA records. But, of the over 2000 incidents reported, drone pilots were located only 19 times. It's impossible to impose an orderly system for drone traffic if pilots know they can slip away without consequences: pilot geo-localization is an essential component of effective drone management.
